SWAT THE FLY CAMPAIGN MAKES PAPA WORK AND MAMA'S GREATLY WORRIED

CITY ORDINANCES REGARDING MANURE PILES TO BE ENFORCED

MONDAY LAST CHANCE

"Swatting the Fly" Keeps Half the Population of the City Busy and Board of Health Takes the Campaign Reins.

The "Swat the Fly" campaign goes on unabated, and there happens to be many a husband and father who has it in for The Upland News, all because this publication, in a recent issue, told of the number of germs that each and every fly carried on its right hind leg.

On man said his milk bill was getting beyond him, for in the days gone by a fly in the milk didn't bother the wife and daughters, but since The News told of the danger if a fly landed thusly, now the milk, Mr. Fly and the pitcher were all consigned to the scrap heap, and the cost of upkeep at his house was soaring skywards to such an extent that he would have to ask for more salary or file papers of bankruptcy.

Another man with a bunch of whiskers read in The News about how many flies there were and the number of bacteria each carried with him, and thereupon decided that it was bad enough to have flies crawling over the hair of his head, without having them deposit that number of deadly germs in his whiskers, so he hied himself to the barber, as he found wearing a wire screen was decidedly inconvenient, especially at mealtime.

And thus have the experiences of men and women of the city varied, and today they know more about flies than they ever did. "Mac the Medicine Man" of the Upland Pharmacy, states that he thought the population of the town had grown to twenty thousand last Saturday, for he advertised in The Upland News to give away a fly swatter if those receiving same would exert their energy at the working end of said instrument. The result was that long before the day was fairly on its way the Upland Pharmacy had run out of its supply of fly swatters. One husband thought to get out of killing the flies at home and reported to his better half that the "fly swatters" were all gone at the pharmacy, and straightaway did he wend his way back to town to buy one at 10c, and the larger part of Sunday his wife saw to it that hubby was busy.

Thus the man who says the people don't read The Upland News is finding out whether they do or not, and if you happen to find a man who has experienced the effect of this "Swat the Fly" campaign you'll find a man whose wife reads The News, and he will be reading it from now on.

Lead on with the swatting! Dr. Abbott of the Health Board, assisted by Health Officer Bowman, have now taken the reins in hand and the campaign promises to result in a few men appearing before Judge Crane and some red hot trials as to whether or not the city ordinance which states that manure shall be placed in boxes with a cover and the cover closed, is to be observed or not.

More flies breed about stables and manure piles than any other one place, and Dr. Abbott states that if men owning horses would build a box for the mature, have a hole in the top with a fly trap over the hole, they could be of more assistance in ridding this town of flies than a fly swater working 25 hours a day in the hands of every man, woman and child in town.

And this ordinance is going to be enforced, says the Health Board, for in spite of the fact that men owning horses and cows and chickens have been repeatedly requested to clean up their yards and observe the city ordinance, they have paid absolutely no atention to it, and commencing Monday morning Health Officer Bowman will be on the job, and if you haven't observed the city ordinance regarding cleanliness and keeping stable manure in a box, better get to the job, for those who fail to do so will be cited to appear before Judge Crane.

GRIM REAPER CALLS MRS. J. C. STOCKER

HAD BEEN A RESIDENT OF UPLAND SINCE 1897

Mother of "Jake" Stocker and Mrs. Zimmerman Passes to the Great Beyond—She Was a Native of Switzerland.

Miss Magdelene Dallenback was born in 1852 at Stavisburg, near Thome, Canton Berne, Switzerland. At the age of sixteen she was confirmed in the German Reformed Church, in which fellowship she remained faithful until God said "It is enough; come up higher." In 1879 she was married to Jacob Stocker, who survives her. Six children were born to this union, four of whom died in infancy, thus preceding the mother to the spirit land.

In 1883 Mr. and Mrs. Stocker came to America, locating at Philadelphia, Pa., where they remained for three years. In May, 1886, they decided to move west, this time locating at Amazonia, Mo., and for twenty years Mrs. Stocker cast her lot with the little church of that place, working in the Sunday School and helping in the music. She was able to sing the songs of Zion and rejoiced to gather her family and friends about her in the home and sing these spiritual, helpful songs of the Gospel. Mrs. Stocker was a kind, helpful neighbor. Where there was sickness she went, to help and heal. Many hearts back in Amazonia will feel the loss of this good motherly woman.

In 1907 the family moved to Upland. Thus for eight years she has lived and moved among us, endearing herself to all regardless of nationality or language. She was patient in suffering and triumphant in death.

On the evening of June 18th, at 7 minutes past 9 o'clock, God's finger touched and she slept, "a calm and undisturbed repose unbroken by the last of foes."

Of those left behind to mourn her going is the beloved husband, Jacob Stocker; the son, J. C. Stocker; one daughter, Mrs. Louise Zimmerman; four grandchildren; two brothers, John and Alfred Dallenbach, John residing at Amazonia, Mo., and Alfred at Omaha, Neb. To this immediate circle must be added a host of friends who shall miss her badly.

The last ten weeks of her life she spent in the home of her daughter, on West Twenty-first street. Here she received every attention that loving care could give. But it was not the will of the Heavenly Father that she should recover. She often spoke of the kindness of her neighbors on East Eleventh street; also in loving appreciation of her daughter's neighbors on Twenty-first street.

She now rests from her labors and her works do follow her.

"My way has wound across the desert years,
And cares infest
My path, and through the flowing of hot tears
I pine for rest.

"And I am restless still; 't will soon be o'er,
For down the west
Life's sun is setting, and I see the shore
Where I shall rest."

S. S. SAMPSON.

H. H. CALDWELL IS TO SPEAK SATURDAY NIGHT

Encouraged by the success attending three recent street meetings conducted by Howard H. Caldwell of Los Angeles, local Socialists have engaged Mr. Caldwell to speak again in Upland next Saturday and Sunday nights. The subject for Saturday evening will be "Government Ownership and Socialism," under which head Mr. Caldwell will point out the differences between the ends sought by these two movements. On Sunday night the speaker will talk on "The Economic Basis of Morality."

Saturday night's lecture will be delivered on the street, at which time announcement will be made of the place of meeting for the following evening. It is probable that the Colonial Theater will be secured for Sunday night, and if so Mr. Caldwell will announce the fact at his first lecture.

Speaking on both evenings will begin at 7:30.

After doing the hostess stunt at a reception a woman takes off her smile and rests.

THE EVER POPULAR BAND CONCERT

TWO HUNDRED AUTO PARTIES ATTEND CONCERT

Director Wilding and First Cornetist Burt to Play Duet at Tonight's Concert—A Big Crowd Is Again Expected.

Last Thursday night proved a record breaker for the band concert season and it is doubtful if more people will attend any of the concerts during the summer season, for by count there were some two hundred automobiles.

Again tonight the band has an excellent program. A cornet duet by Director Wilding and Harold Burt, first cornetist, promises to be of a high class, while the overture, "Stradella," and the suite, "Dwellers of the Western World," are all equally interesting.

The program for tonight follows:

1. March, "Transcontinental"... .....Hughes
2. Selection, "The Time, the Place and the Girl".....Howard
3. Cornet Duet, "The Pearls,".. .....Kling
   Messrs. Wilding and Burt
4. Spanish Dance, "Manana," Missud
5. March, "Blaze of Honor," Lincoln
6. Overture, "Stradella".....Flotow
7. Suite, "Dwellers of the Western World" ..... Sousa
   (a) "The Red Man."
   (b) "The White Man."
   (c) "The Black Man."
8. Remick's Hits No. 15.....Lampe
9. "Star-Spangled Banner."

GREAT INFLUX TO BIG BEAR VALLEY

All Saturday afternoon, Saturday night and most of Sunday automobiles arrived at Big Bear Lake at the rate of one every twenty minutes. And still they come!

Such was the word received Monday from Big Bear. The Santa Ana Canyon road is the scene of a constant procession of vehicles of all kinds, some going up with people who intend to spend only a few hours, others laden down with camp equipage and people who will spend days or weeks in the mountains, others carrying supplies of all kinds for the crowds which will soon fill the resorts and camping places. And there are many rigs coming down, laden with fishermen and tourists who have spent one or a few days at Big Bear, most of them having a few fish carefully wrapped up in cool, wet sacking, earnest of "fish feeds" as soon as they arrive home, and of long hours spent in the family circle, and with envious listeners in office and store, telling how the "big one" was caught, and of a "bigger one" that snapped the tackle and got away after half an hour's fighting with the leviathan. Needless to say, the fish left in the lake are many times larger than any which have been brought home. And many of the fish brought home are pounds lighter when unwrapped than when they were caught, and Mr. Fisherman has to explain to derisive wifey all about how rapidly fish "shrink" in the dry mountain air after they have been removed from their native element.

Charles M. Grow, of the Southern California Gas Company, is one of the Ike Waltons who returned Sunday night. He stated that fishing was not all it "might have been," and then confessed that he and his fishing companion, fishing from the shore, with no boat, had landed four big ones, averaging several pounds apiece, in the Sunday's fishing, and that had they had landing nets or gaff hooks they would have landed several beauties. Now, in times gone by, the angler who landed one big fish, from the shore, in a day's outing, considered himself lucky. Now two fishermen strike seven big ones from the shore in a few hours of fishing. People in boats were doing better. You can judge for yourself as to whether fishing is good in Big Bear.

Beyond

I wonder if the tides of spring
Will always bring me back again
Mute rapture at the simple thing
Of lilacs blowing in the rain?

If so, my heart will ever be
Above all fear, for I shall know
There is a greater mystery
Beyond the time when lilacs blow.

NO EXCUSE WILL BE ACCEPTABLE NOW THAT A SWIMMING POOL IS ASSURED

SIX THOUSAND DOLLARS COST OF PROPOSED SWIMMING POOL

IN CHARGE OF BOARD

Men and Women Representative of Upland and Ontario Discuss Idea of Swimming Pool for Use of School Pupils

A swimming pool at the Chaffey Union High School is now an assured fact. A meeting was called by Mr. J. O. Mills at the High School on Tuesday afternoon for the presentation of plans for such a pool, as well as to plan ways and means to pay for it. A representative from both the Ontario and Upland Chamber of Commerce, city trustees and grammar school trustees from both places and others were asked to be present. The meeting was called to order by J. O. Mills, and on motion E. C. Harwood acted as chairman, with J. O. Mills as secretary.

It seemed wisest, after discussion pro and con, that the swimming pool be built by the High School board, as it would be on the High School grounds (the High School grounds now represent the center of population of the entire colony) and the High School faculty and trustees would have the responsibility anyway, and that the expense be met by the High School, as in this way the whole colony would share the expense.

The plans, outlined ONLY, are for a building to cost in the neighborhood of $6000 and in keeping with the other buildings; the water used to be changed every two weeks, constantly filtering meanwhile, this same water to be used for irrigation purposes on the grounds; the pool to be constantly supervised; and to be used, not only by the High School students, but by the Grammar School pupils as well, during the school year; during the summer a small fee will be asked to pay for the upkeep. This is a mere outline, the detail to be filled in by the board.

At this meeting Mr. Woodbridge represented the Upland Board of Trustees and Mr. White the Ontario; Chambers of Commerce, Mr. Tonneson, Upland; Mr. Swan, Ontario; San Antonio Water Company, Mr. Smith; Chaffey Union High School, Mr. Harwood, Mr. Warmer, Mr. Mills, Mr. Graber; Grammar Schools, Upland, Mrs. Manker; Ontario, Mr. Magill, Mr. Hill and Mr. Chaffey.

FIRE TRUCK IS EN-ROUTE TO UPLAND

Mayor T. R. Woodbridge received a bill of lading on Tuesday to the effect that the American-La France fire truck recently purchased by the city left Elmira, N. Y., on the 17th of June. Agent T. M. Nichols of the Santa Fe states that it should arrive here within twelve days and will certainly be here by July 1st. The fire station is progressing nicely and Chief Manker and his men will be ready to take charge of the new machine as soon as it arrives, Howard Hobaugh being the official driver of the new machine.

FOOTHILL BOULEVARD TO BE PAVED THROUGH RIALTO

Monday morning the County Supervisors authorized the Highway Commission to use its equipment and proceed as soon as is possible to pave that portion of San Bernardino avenue which is included within the city limits of Rialto. This is known as the Foothill boulevard.

This piece of road is a part of the county's paved highway system, but was not included in the bond issue because it was within the limits of a corporate city. The Rialto people could not pave it, however, so the supervisors agreed to complete this gap in the paving system.

State highway specifications will be adhered to in paving this strip of road, and the Highway Commission was asked to complete the work as soon as men and equipment can conveniently be placed on the job.

THE FINAL VESPER SERVICE SUNDAY

MISS HAURY SOLOIST AT VESPER SERVICE

Last Vesper Service of the Season to Be Given Sunday Afternoon at 4:15—Next Service to Be Held in September.

The last of the vesper services at the Presbyterian Church until September will be held in that church Sunay afternoon at 4:15, and this will practically be the first appearance of Miss Dora Tucker at the organ, she having taken the position recently resigned by Mr. Hirschler.

On Sunday's program Miss Haury will sing "With Verdure Clad," and she is said by those who have heard her to have a voice of wonderful volume and pure quality.

The service of Sunday promises to be largely attended, for the following program is said to be one of the best presented in many months:

Prelude, "Andante".....Merkel
Anthem, "O How Amiable"....Buck
Anthem, "Awake" (Chorus from "Daughter of Jairus"....Stainer
Offertory, "Serenade".....Gounod
Solo, "With Verdure Clad"...Haydn
Miss Haury
Anthem, "Seek Ye the Lord"... .....Roberts
Tenor Solo..... .....Dorsey G. Howell
Postlude, "Chorus of Shepherds" .....Lemmens

FIFTY DOLLARS AND 90 DAYS FOR HER

Fifty dollars and ninety days in jail was what Refugia Corea drew for selling booze within the confines of the city of Upland. At the original hearing this daughter of Mexico pleaded not guilty, but changed her plea to guilty yesterday morning when the case was called before Judge Crane. With the fine goes one or two provisos. On the payment of the fine of $50 the jail sentence is suspended, providing that Refugia shakes the dust of Upland from her shoes and remains outside the city forever and a day. Attorney Trujilla appeared for the woman and Attorney Kavanaugh of San Bernardino appeared for the city in the place of City Attorney Swing, he being busy with the San Bernardino County and City water suit against Riverside City and County.

BOYS' AUTO CONTEST AT THE COLONIAL

The Auto Contest at the Colonial goes merrily on its way, getting hotter and hotter and closer and closer with each night's voting. Almost every day sees a new name at the head of the list.

Gerry Maurer, with over 4000 votes Tuesday night, went back into the lead Wednesday. Robt. Sawyer, after leading for several days, has dropped to fourth place, though still very much in the running, as are Arthur Waterman, Cecil Kintzi, Clarence Sikes and Tommy Craig.

Next week is the last week of the contest, so it is to be expected that the race then will be harder fought than ever.

George Maurer 8255, Geo. Leibman 7410, Clarence Sikes 6745, Robt. Sawyer 6290, Cecil Kintzi 6245, Arthur Waterman 5625, Tommy Craig 3490, Lewis Greece 3415, Bert McMaster 2170, Edwin Clark 1675, Raymond Maurer 435, Gardner Stowe 370, Nadine Osborn 325, Alice Carpenter 270, Leavenworth Wheeler, Jr., 235, Edward Kirk 210, John B. Morrow, Jr., 95, Otto Couett 80, Kenneth Walton 50, Wm. Bowdin 50, Paul Harwood 50, Billy Baxter 40, Otto Martin 20, Carl Harine 10.

Out of the Mouths of Babes

"Why, Tommy," said the visitor, "how you suggest your father! You have his eyes, his nose and his mouth."

"Yes, and that ain't all," replied the little fellow proudly. "I've got a pair of his old pants on, too."

UPLAND GIRL ON EUGENIC HONEYMOON

HONEYMOON TRIP OVER THE RIM OF THE WORLD

Mrs. Stenberg, Formerly Mrs. Raymond Meade of Upland, Tells of Her Eugenic Honeymoon in Mountain Fastnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bror Herman Constantine Stenberg, principals in last week's eugenic wedding, are back from both the heaven of love and the heaven of the skies, and announce their decision of the discussion that followed their wedding: "What is the ideal eugenic honeymoon?"

They stood on both the summit of Old Greyback, 11,600 feet, and Mt. San Bernardino, 10,800 feet, and overlooked the world.

Never had anyone before scaled both Southern California's giant peaks on the same day. The eugenic bride and groom accomplished the feat.

"As we stood on the summit of Mt. San Bernardino," said Stenberg, "we looked into the Pacific. Santa Catalina island was a dot of emerald on an ocean of blue. We turned to the east and there was the Colorado river, twisting its way to the sea. To the north was Death Valley, and it looked like a wash-basin. We could see the jagged peaks of The Needles mountains, and all of the desert. Below us was Bear Valley, the crest of the San Bernardino range and its forests, and then the valleys of three or four counties into the hearts of which we looked.

"I have stood on peaks in the Alps, but all I could see were other snow-clad peaks. There is nothing in Europe like that view we saw on our honeymoon."

Mrs. Stenberg was even more enthusiastic than her husband, for it was her first trip to the crest of a great peak.

"I at first didn't know with what to compare that great view," she said. "And then I compared it with our love. It was the grandest sight I ever saw—the world stretched out beneath us. It made my heart well up to stand there and look out over everything for hundreds of miles in every direction. I am so glad that we chose our eugenic honeymoon trip for the top of the world. We looked over the top of everything—Old Baldy, Cucamonga Peak, Mt. San Jacinto, and I think it was Mt. Whitney, which rises from the shore of Owens Lake, that we could see in the dim distance."

The day the eugenic couple chose for their climb to the crest of the great peaks was clear of mist and haze.

The bride and groom told of sliding for a quarter of a mile down the slope of Mt. Greyback on snow that was hundreds of feet deep, as they were making their way across the saddle to Mt. San Bernardino. Only with snow burying the great rocks and boulders on the ridge between the two peaks is the trip possible.

They were 26 hours on the trip from Forest Home to the top of the two peaks and back, and it was a honeymoon hike of real thrills, for they were lost at night on the precipitous and rugged slope of Mt. San Bernardino, where a misstep meant death thousands of feet below.

Greyback peak was reached first. They were 11,600 feet above the ocean that was only 70 miles away. They stood on this great peak as the sun went down, many minutes after the valleys below were clothed in darkness. They started back for Forest Home down the slope that is unblazed with a trail, on the theory that if they followed the stream made by the melting snows they would reach the canyon below. At 9 o'clock, however, they were halted on the face of the great cliff, the bottom of which they could not see, and over which tumbled the icy waters in a waterfall.

They had to rub their bodies to keep up the circulation, so cold was the night. At 2 o'clock the day began to dawn and they resumed their travel, and were at Forest Home for a late breakfast. Their arrival was anxiously awaited, for there was fear something had happened to them.

Stenberg brought back cards and other relics left on the peaks by others who have in the past scaled the mountain, to prove that they had made good on their idea of what is a proper eugenic honeymoon.

Mrs. Stenberg will be remembered here as Mrs. Raymond Meade.

UPLAND'S BUSINESS MEN MAKE PLANS FOR MONSTER JUBILEE DAY SOON

MIDDLE OF AUGUST PROBABLE DATE FOR BIG EVENT PLANNED

STRICTLY UP-TO-DATE

Committee of Five Named to Draft and Present Plans to Meeting to Be Held Tomorrow Night, Friday, June 25.

As the result of an article appearing in The News, a meeting of business men of the city was held last Friday night at the Band Room and the idea of holding a Fourth of July celebration was thoroughly discussed by the thirty or more business men present.

It was at first thought that a good, old-fashioned Fourth—yet a sane one—was the thing, but after going over the various details and a general exchange of ideas it was decided that the time was too short, that too many had already made plans for the national day, and that there were too many other attractions for that day, and that it was best for Upland to select a later date and have a day all its own devoted to one grand jubilee, with a strictly modernized program continuing throughout the day.

The date suggested was about the first or middle of the month of August, but the details were left to a committee of five men, and tomorrow night (Friday, June 25th) these men will make a report and the work of preparation for the biggest day in the history of the city will be set in motion.

At the meeting last Friday night there were fully twenty-five of the business houses represented, and tomorrow night each and every business house should have a representative there and citizens generally are invited to attend.

Councilman C. V. Lambrigger was asked to take charge of the meeting held last Friday night and in getting the ideas of the different men present he called on each to state what his individual idea was regarding Upland's holding a jubilee day. Each man present expressed his idea, the consensus of opinion being as above stated.

Mr. Lambrigger was asked to name a committee, and he named one of the strongest committees that ever took the helm of an Upland celebration. E. C. Mehl made the motion that five men be named. Mr. Mehl's motion was unanimously supported and the following are the men who will present plans and specifications, etc., etc., tomorrow night: M. Whitmoyer of the Colonial Theater, C. W. Churchill of Churchill's Confectionery, C. C. Eymann of the Eymann-Goerz Hardware Co. and the Eymann Lumber Co., H. C. Moore of the Commercial National Bank, and F. H. Manker of the Sikes-Manker Company.

These men held a subsequent meeting to the big one and until a late hour were discussing plans for the big day, and throughout the week have been mapping out a plan to present to the meeting of business men and citizens to be held tomorrow night.

Those attending the meeting were Miss McQuillen, Mrs. R. B. Bordwell, C. P. Fuller, G. S. Adams, J. W. Mehl, F. H. Manker, W. F. Phillips, D. F. Dettweiler, A. H. Johnson, C. W. Churchill, W. E. Westland, M. Whitmoyer, C. M. Sikes, D. E. Dobbins, C. C. Eymann, C. V. Lambrigger, E. B. Reynolds, E. H. Haury, V. H. Wilson, E. C. Mehl, P. H. McQuillen, W. L. Brown, L. N. Kirk, H. C. Moore, J. F. Anderson.

She Threw Badly

Two young girls were drinking tea at a Broadway restaurant when a young man raised his hat and passed on. As he passed the first girl blushed, displayed a beautiful ring on her white hand and murmured, "Well, Jack and I are to be married in another month."

"But," said the other girl, "I thought you had thrown Jack over!"

"Oh, so I did," the first replied, blushing again and hiding her face, "but—but you know how badly a girl throws!"

A coat of paint will sometimes make an old house look as good as new, but never an old woman.

THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1915

UPLAND is to have one grand jubilee day during the month of August or September, and in view of that fact some of the energy of every man and woman in the city is needed to make it a success. Plans for the big day are not complete, as the committee appointed at the first meeting of business men is busy exchanging ideas and getting suggestions from men of the town. It is planned to make this day one of strictly modern idea, with all the new features that can be originated and put in motion for the big event. A meeting of business men and citizens generally is to be held Friday night and if you are interested be sure and be there.

ALTHOUGH the medical fraternity doesn't believe in advertising because it's unethical, you can depend on every medical convention to pull off something that gives it a deal of free advertising. The latest comes from a convention in San Francisco, where medicos decided that the old-time kiss should be done away with, and in its place should come a tap of the hand upon the cheek of a friend instead of the osculatory brand that has been used for, lo these many years. Now The News man fully realizes that he has passed that kissable stage, but should it ever happen through a strange chain of intermingling events that he was to be kissed by a maiden fair of face and form, let it be of that good old-fashioned brand described by a Los Angeles man as "Wagnerian!" Thus has been added one more free add to the medical free advertising campaign.

LEAVE it to a fraternity brother to give the plan away, for now a lot of us will have to stay at home. The Board of Supervisors invited newspaper folks of Southern California to be its guests on a trip over the "101 Miles on the Rim of the World," and in the unique invitation issued a feather was neatly fastened, to add to its attractiveness. But Editor McDonald of the Chino Herald has given it away and a lot of us must remain at home. Bro. McDonald says: "At the bottom of the paper there is a quail feather, tipped in red, glued to the sheet. Possibly it was intended for a 'chicken' sign. Will know about that later." Et tu brute! The nerve of that man McDonald to give away the secret is indeed annoying, for many of us must remain quietly at home and while the other scribes enjoy the time of their lives, those at home will be dreaming of gorgeous mountain scenery—and "chickens."

IT IS sometimes gratifying to see ourselves as others see us, and here is what a Whittier man has to say on Upland and her band:

"Practically all towns and cities in Southern California give direct support to a brass band. Here are the facts concerning one:

"Upland, a neighboring town of twenty-seven hundred inhabitants, has a municipal band of twenty members.

"The city pays over a thousand dollars a year out of its treasury for its support.

"The band gives one concert each week for a period of four months.

"Each man receives a certain amount for each concert.

"The band has a fine bandstand built by the ladies' organizations of the town.

"Good music, well played, is a feature of all programs.

"The band has been organized several years and is a first-class organization.

"Automobiles line the streets for blocks on all sides of the bandstand.

"People come for some miles around to hear the concerts.

"Upland's band is considered a big success by its people, and is a sure thing in the future.

"What this town has done most others are doing. From coast to coast, in every community, the desire for a brass band has manifested itself today. Not only cities, towns and villages, but farm neighborhoods are also beginning everywhere to organize their own bands."

WE DO not know Miss Susan Glasspell of Sacramento, but she evidently knows things, and she is deserving of a place on the roll of honor in American circles. She recently gave the club women of her city some interesting facts in relation to the newspaper business, and included in her paper some very valuable "don'ts" that will meet the approbation of every newspaper man. They ought to meet the eye of every person who has to do with the newspapers in an unofficial way and be followed.

"Don't come to the newspaper office Thursday with something that happened Monday. Come on Monday.

"Don't come at two minutes to 3 o'clock when the paper goes to press at two minutes after. The assassination of the President of the United States would be resented at that hour.

"Don't ask a reporter to run a column of reprint stuff that may serve your cause, but has practically no news value, and then when you have a good live story give it to the other paper. The reporter will not like that a bit.

"Don't go to the managing editor and ask that a legitimate news story be kept out. It would be just as unreasonable and just as indelicate to go to the banker and ask him to give you money, or to the lawyer and ask him to give up one of his cases. A newspaper is a business enterprise. When you ask it to keep out news, you ask it to injure its own business.

"Don't blame the reporter if something you gave him or her does not appear. It is not the reporter's fault. The city editor is the court of last appeal, and he works on the principle of the survival of the fittest. The fact that your committee is going to do something may be important to you, but the fact that some girl drank carbolic acid is more important to the city editor.

"Don't say 'I can't understand why the papers make so many mistakes.' If you had ever been in the business you would say instead: 'I think it one of the miracles of the age that newspapers can do that amount of work under that amount of pressure and make so few mistakes!' "

We doff our hats to Miss Glaspell. She has earned the thanks of every newspaper editor by her clear enunciation of many of the cardinal principles of the relations between the editor and his occasional contributor.

THERE has been much said regarding William Jennings Bryan, but here is what the Chino Herald thinks about it:

"And William Jennings Bryan slid out of the seat of Secretary of State in the cabinet of President 'Hoe-His-Row' Wilson, like a hooked fish slides back into the water among its kind when the hook slips and drops the fish on the mossy bank just as the intrepid fisherman is about to grasp it. However, Bryan did not drop among his kind; for his kind changed after he started sliding from the Secretary's chair and would not give him his old place back in the swimming hole.

"Some score or so years ago William Jennings Bryan rode out of the West just like the historical young Lochinvar rode out of the west to capture his lady-love—only Lochinvar rode a horse, while Bryan rode in a Pullman. Bryan rode out of the West and landed in a certain big convention hall in Chicago where a national Democratic convention was in session.

"Fresh from the wheatfields of Nebraska, with his whole system impregnated with the 'chaff' from the wheat, Bryan tore into that convention and talked everybody off the floor. By his eloquence he took the assemblage by storm and was soon the idol of the assembled Democrats. He made a speech in which he advocated the coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, one line of which became famous. 'Shall we crucify the country upon a cross of gold?'' demanded William, and the delegates arose with one accord and yelled 'No! No!' And they there and then nominated Bryan as a candidate for President of the United States. He was beaten.

"Once more did Bryan journey forth, and once more was he nominated. Still did the intrepid William journey forth and get the nomination—and once again was he defeated.

"Now comes William Jennings into publicity again; this time in the big Democratic national convention which convened in Baltimore. Once more was he the dominant force in the convention. Champ Clark aspired to become the Democratic nominee, but Bryan read him out of the convention and settled the toga gracefully over the shoulders of Woodrow Wilson.

"And it came to pass that Teddy Roosevelt split the Republican party wide open and caused the election of Mr. Wilson, who, in gratitude to Bryan, appointed him to the responsible post of Secretary of State.

"When Bryan succeeded in nominating Wilson he thought he could handle him and become the real head of the Government. Mr. Wilson would not have it that way, and soon he and Bryan began to love each other a little less.

"Finally a little document which is to be sent to Germany causes such a rupture between Wilson and Bryan that the latter cannot in honor to himself longer remain in the cabinet of President 'Hoe-Your-Row' Wilson, so resigns and slides out of the chair. Every member of the cabinet concurs in the wording of the document with the exception of the Nebraskan.

"When the news was flashed over the wires that Bryan had resigned from the cabinet, the people at large were astounded. They thought that the note which Bryan had refused to sign must be a positive declaration of war, or tantamount to that. When the note was printed and read by the mass of the people its mild tone caused the laugh to go up all over the United States at the expense of Bryan. A 'boob' was one of the mildest epithets hurled at him. There was nothing in the note that a person who believes in the transmigration of the soul could not sign with perfect impunity. Such squeamishness would revolt at the sight of a knife sticking a blood pudding.

"And now, horror upon horrors! Bryan threatens to enter politics again and oppose Wilson for a second term as President! Wilson, the most popular man in the United States today, to be downed by a man who has fallen so far in the estimation of the public in the last week that a grappling hook could not fish him from the well, to oppose Wilson! Think of that! Why, 'tis but to laugh. San Marino, the smallest nation in the world, with a population of 8000 all told, and a standing army of only 950 men, which declared war against Austria recently, is a serious menace to Austria and Germany compared to the menace that Bryan is to Wilson in the coming campaign.

"William Jennings Bryan fell far and struck the ground hard when he resigned as Secretary of State in President Wilson's cabinet. His name has been hissed on various occasions since then when mentioned in theaters and by public speakers. He is the laughing stock of the world today. In fact, his resignation causes the suspicion that he might have been a weakling in the cabinet since his appointment, instead of the brains of the official family of the White House. He might well be compared to the fly that rode on the hub of a chariot wheel and yelled at passing bugs to 'look at the dust I am raising!'

"Exit William Jennings Bryan from any further important position in the United States.

"At the crucial moment he could not stand the test!"

A woman asked us how we managed to write items that just filled the space in the paper. She never saw the foreman trying to close the last page with eleven columns of "must go" matter to be placed in seven columns.

USE NEWSPAPER AS TEXTBOOK SAYS JOURNALISM PROFESSOR

The newspaper ought to be used as a high school text book and as a laboratory that is the doctrine that Merle Thorpe, Professor of Journalism in the University of Kansas, will set before the students in a new course on "High School Journalism," in the summer session of the University of California, at Berkeley from June 21 to July 31.

He declares that current newspapers and magazines ought to be used in the class room to vitalize the study of civics, history, and English composition. Moreover, he believes the publication of papers by the high schools and colleges exceedingly useful training. He commends development of helpful relations between the high school and the local paper, already existing in many California towns, by which the community may be kept in touch, through contributions from the school, with the work of the school and with the new developments in education and science. In this summer session course Professor Thorpe will advise high school teachers also as to how to write useful contributions to educational and technical journals.

Two other courses are to be given this summer by Professor Thorpe for those who want to make newspaper work their business in life—one on materials, methods, and organization of the newspaper, and another on editorial theory and practice. J. Melvin Lee, lecturer on Journalism in New York University, is to give a course on advertising, and to help Professor Thorpe supervise the "Summer Session Californian," issued by the students during the summer. Besides practical experience on this paper, the best of the students are to have opportunity to help with the publicity work for the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

This is the second summer Professor Thorpe has taught journalism at Berkeley. He is known as one of the most successful teachers of the subject in America, for to varied experience as city editor, editor, and Washington correspondent he has added a number of years of teaching and lecturing. He has just published a four-hundred-page book, "The Coming Newspaper," in which he discusses the methods and ethics of newspaper making, news gathering and handling, advertising, circulation, administration, and editorial direction.

Solitude

Solitude tries a man in a way society does not, it throws him upon his own resources, and if these resources be meager, if the ground he occupies in and of himself be poor and narrow he will have a sorry time of it. Hence we readily attribute some extra virtues to those persons who voluntarily embrace solitude, who live alone in the country or in the woods, or in the mountains and find life sweet. We know they cannot live without converse, without society of some sort, and we credit them with the power of invoking it from themselves, or else of finding more companionship with dumb things than with ordinary mortals.—John Burroughs.

WILL CALIFORNIA BE WET OR DRY?

In every county of California today there is shaping the outlines of a wet-and-dry campaign for 1916 that will probably bring the bitterest battle of its kind ever staged in any State in the Union.

The action of the California dry convention at Fresno, when it becomes known, will send terror to the heart of the saloonkeeper, for it presents a double-edged offense that will be harder to meet than the straight State-wide prohibition question proved to be last year.

The Anti-Saloon League, regarded as the most perfect temperance organization ever gotten together, dominated the Fresno convention and succeeded in having adopted two proposed amendments, one of which provides for the eradication of the saloon; the other providing for the utter elimination of the liquor traffic at a later date.

The press dispatches from Fresno have misconstrued the true action of the convention. That body adopted an amendment which, if approved by the people, will close everything but the breweries, distilleries and wineries. At those three places liquor may be purchased in two-gallon lots or more and delivered only to common carriers, to pharmacists, and to the homes of bonafide residents.

This proposed amendment provides that there shall be no retail or wholesale of liquor in California after January 1, 1918, except at the place of manufacture, and then only as stipulated.

The second amendment provides that there shall be no further manufacture and sale of liquor, except for medicinal and scientific purposes, after January 1, 1920. This is total prohibition, and was beaten decisively last year.

The Anti-Saloon League feels that the stock argument of the liquor men against invasion of personal rights and liberties cannot lie against the first amendment, inasmuch as it does not deprive any actual resident from ordering liquor sent to his home from the brewery, the winery or the distillery. He must only buy it in two-gallon lots or more.

Adroit Amendment

The adroitness with which this amendment was adopted is the cause of all the deep concern which will be felt by the saloonkeepers. The retail liquor dealers' organization last fall freely admitted that the sentiment of the people is such that if the issue were clearly an anti-saloon fight, instead of a State-wide prohibition affair, the people would vote down the saloon.

There is little or no sympathy between the Prohibition party and the Anti-Saloon League. The latter organization, dominating the Fresno convention, mapped out a line of action upon a compromise basis, providing first for the elimination of the saloon and later for total prohibition, will probably run against the usual State-wide prohibition amendment which the Prohibitionists will place upon the ballot.

The Prohibitionists will not temporize. They are for utter annihilation of the liquor traffic, and will not stop at the closing of the saloon. The Anti-Saloon League believes that the people will adopt the first amendment, which would put a stop to the retailing of liquor, whereas there may not be so pronounced an affirmative vote for the utter destruction of the liquor traffic. The league feels that part of the victory would be gained in the adoption of the first amendment and would take chances on winning the second also.

The Fresno convention decided to circulate petitions for the placing of the two proposals on the ballot for November, 1916. A State committee of thirty members, fifteen north and fifteen south of the Tehachepi, has been formed and is already at work. There is not the slightest question about getting the necessary signatures.

The two proposed amendments which are to be the center of a terrific struggle next year are:

Amendment No. 1

Section 1. After January 1, 1918, no alcoholic liquor shall be kept, given away or sold in any saloon, dramshop, room, cellar, dive, store, hotel, restaurant, cafe, club, dance hall or other place of public resort, except in a pharmacy or on the premises where such liquors are manufactured.

Sec. 2. After January 1, 1918, no person, firm, corporation or association, which owns or manages any of the places of public resort specified in the previous section shall permit any alcoholic liquor to be consumed therein.

Sec. 3. After January 1, 1918, no person, firm, corporation or association shall sell any alcoholic liquor or shall solicit or accept an order for any such liquor anywhere in the State of California, except in a pharmacy or on the premises where such liquors are manufactured.

Sec. 4. After January 1, 1819, no

UPLAND W. C. T. U. AT ANNUAL PICNIC

About fifty-five people sat down to the abundant spread of toothsome edibles under the shady trees of Ganesha Park, Friday afternoon. The occasion was the annual outing of the W. C. T. U. of Upland. The program consisted of the regular business session for the forenoon and the reports of the thirty-third State convention in the afternoon.

In the business session during the devotional period tender mention was made of our sister, Mrs. Josephine Littlewood, whose life on earth has so lately ended. Suggestion was made that each of us are preaching our own funeral sermon as we live day by day among our fellowmen, and that God knows our sorrows as well as our joys and is always sympathetic wit hhis children. Words of sympathy and prayer were voiced for the bereaved relatives.

"Messages of Flowers" was the subject of roll-call. As the ladies responded, delegates told of a bouquet of twenty forget-me-nots presented to the outgoing State treasurer, who had served for twenty years.

Christ is represented by the Rose of Sharon—strong and brilliant—and also as the lily-of-the-valley, the tender and gentle.

One delegate told of the three bouquets of twenty-five one-dollar bills each, arranged in greenery and presented to the other three outgoing State officers of the W. C. T. U. in appreciation of their faithful services.

Mrs. Colborn was the first delegate to report. She told of the beginnings of the splendid delegation of women, of their enthusiasm and earnestness as the battle against rum wages hotter and hotter. She spoke of the "up! policy," recommended for the convention by the president, namely "Get up, speak up, shut up," each in its appropriate place.

She told of the organization of the convention and then of the delightful welcome tendered by the various Christian bodies of Pasadena—too flattering for modest women to repeat, but none the less cheering and true.

The "Affirmation of Principles" was reiterated as follows:

"We affirm our belief in the following principles: That total abstinence from alcoholic liquors is the only safe law of life;

"That prohibition is the only adequate means for the destruction of liquor traffic;

"That the time will come when the political party that declares for prohibition will be the dominant party and when the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages will be the law of the land with a prohibition administration to uphold the righteous and beneficent law;

"That purity of life is equally binding on men and women;

"That a living wage and equal pay for equal work are economic necessities;

"That the Government should not derive revenue from the vices of the people.

"Inasmuch as the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county is seriously considering the passage of a law prohibiting the use of tobacco at the polls on election day, we highly commend such contemplated action to the supervisors of all our counties, in the interests of the comforts of non-smoking voters, who comprise at least one-half of our citizenship."

The presidents of the different counties reported the progress in their work, showing that there is much life and effort and cheer for the gaining forces.

A variation of the program came when four prominent men speakers were given ten minutes each to discuss the "California Dry" proposition. One speaker emphasized that we are to "Re-present the life of Christ in all our work."

Mrs. Billington, our superintendent of mothers' meetings, brought forward a company of little children whose mothers or grandmothers to dedicate to lives of purity and usefulness under the W. C. T. U. banner. Each parent is supposed to earnestly teach these children principles of temperance and engage them in the fight against the twin evils, tobacco and strong drink.

The following is the list of children on whose waists were tied the white ribbon, and who received words of blessing and instruction from the supeirntendent:

Two beautiful songs were rendered by a quartet composed of Mmes. Mehl, Haury, Merchant and Miss Billington.

Mrs. Mehl, as second delegate, told of the peace session Wednes-

Goodyear Fortified Tires Cost Users $5,000,000 Less

Our last price reduction—made February 1st—will save Goodyear users about five million dollars this year. And that was our third reduction in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

Yet Note This

If we omitted those extras, we could save on this year's probable output $1,635,000. We could add that to our profits, yet Goodyear tires would look as good as now.

This year's improvements alone will cost us $500,000 this year. All to give you extra wear. And we shall spend $100,000 on research this year to find more improvements still.

They Are Yours

These extras belong to you. They mean less rim-cuts, less blowouts, less loose treads. They mean more rubber, more fabric, more mileage, less trouble. Most tire users know that, so Goodyear tires far outsell any other.

Prove it yourself this summer. It will bring you tire contentment.

Any dealer, if you ask him, will supply you Goodyear tires.

Men are now adopting Goodyear tires faster than we can supply them. We have never seen anything like it.

Vance-Fetrow—

In the presence of the immediate family, last Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, the marriage of Miss Nellie Marie Fetrow and Mr. Geo. Thomas Vance, Jr., of Kansas City, Mo., was celebrated quietly by the Rev. S. S. Sampson of the Methodist Church at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fetrow. A dinner followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Stowe with Kansas City friends, and the young couple left at once for Arrowhead Hotel and near points. They will be at home after July 1 at the southeast corner of Twenty-first and Euclid avenue.

Masten-Wright—

At 9 o'clock this morning at the Baptist Church, Ontario, J. Don Masten and Miss Opha Wright, both well known here, were united in marriage, the Rev. Perry, pastor of the Baptist Church, officiating. The wedding party was made up of the bride and groom and Mr. Harold Draper as best man and Miss Leila Wright as bridesmaid.

Following the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Masten left for San Diego by automobile, and after a short time taking in the Exposition will return to Upland and be at home to their many friends after July 1st.

Mr. Masten is district manager here for the Growers' Fruit Company, which is one of the largest independent fruit shipping companies operating in this district, while Miss Wright is a daughter of R. W. Wright and is well known in the younger set of the city.

Surprised Them—

Mrs. A. L. Palis surprised her husband and his brother, C. B. Palis of Cincinnati, who is spending a short time here, by planning and carrying out a "stag" in their honor. After preparing and serving the men a six o'clock dinner, she left them to enjoy the evening smoking and chatting, and the men will ever be appreciative of both the dinner and the good time following. The men invited were: T. M. Nichols, S. G. Moore, B. H. Spicer, N. I. Hamer, Dr. Kankel, and Howard Hobaugh.

Merry Wives—

Mrs. C. K. Francisco was a most happy hostess to the members of the "Merry Wives" Embroiery Club when she entertained on Friday afternoon of last week. Shasta daisies and carnations were used in decoration and sherbet and cake was served during the afternoon, with a cool drink of fruitade between times. Those who were able to be present were Mrs. W. L. Brown, Mrs. G. A. Brest, Mrs. D. D. Crew, Mrs. Paul Cushing, Mrs. W. B. Duncan, Mrs. P. O. Long, Mrs. N. G. Pehl, Mrs. E. B. Reynolds, Mrs. W. C. Reynolds, Mrs. C. M. Sikes and Mrs. H. Walter Slugg.

Fire Boys Entertain—

The Upland Volunteer Fire Department will give another of their popular card parties on Tuesday evening, the 29th, at the Woman's Club rooms. The members whose birthdays happen during June will be the hosts.

Honor Mrs. J. L. Sargent—

Mrs. Thos. Nisbet and Mrs. Lucy Stanton entertained most delightfully on Saturday afternoon at the home of the latter in honor of Mrs. J. L. Sargent. The Sargent family leave shortly for Claremont, where they expect to make their home in future. A great many friends called during the afternoon.

Theater Party—

Miss Edna Purvis entertained with a theater party at the Colonial on Wednesday evening in honor of her brother's, F. Sloyd Purvis', birthday. Following the theater cards were enjoyed at the Purvis home on Euclid avenue. Those who wished Mr. Purvis many happy returns of the day were: Miss Eva Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sikes, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Manker and Harold C. Moore.

Prior to the theater party Mr. and Miss Purvis were entertained at 6 o'clock dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Manker.

The Longest Day

It is quite important, when speaking of the longest day in the year, to say what part of the world we are talking about, as will be seen by the following list, which tells the length of the longest day in several places. How unfortunate are the children in Torena, Finland, where the Christmas day is less than three hours in length.

At Stockholm, Sweden, it is eighteen and one-half hours in length.

At Spitzbergen the longest day is three and one-half months.

At London, England, and Bremen, Prussia, the longest day has sixteen and one-half hours.

At Hamburg, Germany, and Dantzig, in Prussia, the longest day has sixteen hours.

At Wardburg, Norway, the longest day lasts from May 21 to July 22 without interruption. At Torena, Finland, June 21st brings a day twenty-two hours long, and Christmas one less than three hours in length.

At New York the longest day is about fifteen hours long, and at Montreal, Canada, it is sixteen hours.

How to Live 200 Years

Mr. William Kinnear writes to the North American Review regarding longevity, and thinks some practical rules may be observed with the result of greatly prolonging life.

He says that seventy per cent of the body is water. Calcareous salts and early matter are held in solution. When these become excessive and resist expulsion the system becomes blocked, the stiffness and dryness of old age comes on, and in time death ensues simply by stoppage of the delicate and exquisite machinery which we call life.

In the first place, he thinks that by judicious selection of food and drink it is possible to minimize the amount of calcerous salts and earthly matter taken into the system. Cereals and nitrogenous Beef and old mutton especially are overcharged with salts and should be avoided by persons of advanced years. Fruits, fish, poultry, young mutton and veal contain less of the earthly salts than other articles of food, and are therefore less harmful.

Summing up, then, the art of living 200 years, Mr. Kinnear says that physical decay may be kept at bay and the approach of old age retarded by avoiding all foods rich in the earth salts, by using much fruit and by taking daily two or three tumblerfuls of distilled water, with about ten drops of diluted phosphoric acid in each glassful.

It will be seen that Mr. Kinnear lays special stress on the liberal use of fruit in the daily diet. All dietary authorities concur in the opinion of the high value of all ripe fruits, such as are so extensively grown in California. Whenever the time shall come that the masses of American people discard, to a great extent, the greasy compounds they now call food and make more liberal use of fruits in their daily living, the period of longevity will almost certainly be increased.

U. S. as an Armament

The United States may soon be tacking some such advertisement as this up over the front door: "General war merchandise. All kinds of cannon, armor, rifles, machine guns, shells, shrapnel cartridges, dynamite and other explosives, together with improved asphyxiating gases. Also side lines of cotton, grain, oil, steel, harvesters, automobiles and miscellaneous manufactured goods."

In other words, it is possible that the United States will become the world's armament shop. Our hold on the powder and shot market is already well established. Our goods have gone far and have given satisfaction to the purchasers. Even the Germans along the western trenches have learned to recognize the native American shell. Perhaps its shriek has a nasal twang, different from the broad vowels of the French and English shells, but its success in spilling human blood is not impaired by its accent.

It is too late in the day to advocate a shutting-down on the export of munitions. Such a step had to be taken at the beginning of hostilities, if it were taken at all, and at that time the public knew nothing about the war traffic.

But the public, and the representatives of the public, should watch with jealous eye the growth of great industries whose business is good in war time and bad in time of peace.

The growth of such industries will add to that absurd but dangerous party which longs to see the United States drunk with the foul wine of militarism, mad with the lust of empire, reeling down through the red mud toward world dominion and ruin.—San Francisco Bulletin.

One on the Schoolmaster

The schoolmaster wanted to know whether the boys had an understanding of the functions of a consulate.

"Supposing," he began, framing his question in the likeliest way to arouse the interest of his hearers, "supposing someone took you up in an aeroplane and after a long, exciting flight dropped you down thousands of miles from home in a country quite foreign, what place would you seek out first of all?"

An eager hand was instantly uplifted.

"Well, Willie, what do you say?"

"Please, sir, the hospital."

Go to a friend for advice, to a stranger for charity, and to a relative for nothing.

It takes a noisy preacher to keep some men awake in church.

SPRING FEVER

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley says spring fever is a physical disorder due to warmth of spring the heavy diet of the winter months. Eat less, he says, and you won't have spring fever.

The Omaha World-Herald has another definition, thus:

"Spring fever is naught but the longing for the out-doors, it is the true call of the wildwood, and nothing in the world will heal the wound except the tangled underbrush, the softly carpeted pastures and the siren-like song of nature's orchestra—the birds."

Both wrong, both in interpretation and instruction. Spring fever isn't a disease and it isn't a longing. It is a delight. And it doesn't call for any avoidance or "healing." Not a bit of it.

Spring fever at its inception is an anticipation; at its height it is supremest bliss; and as the last, lingering sensations grow fainter and fainter in body and mind, the one who has been honored by such and intimacy with the hidden and nameless and almost intangible secrets of nature knows that he is not of common clay, but kin to the angels themselves and superior to every malignity of any kind, though compelled for a time to appear like other men.

Spring fever is but poorly named, for it is not a fever—it is soothing influence. Whosoever has spring fever is favored of the gods. No matter what cares or worries are seeking to oppress him; no matter what wild haste may be exhibited by those near by; no matter with what insistence foolish ambition and vain-glorious self-seeking shout at him to exert himself and push forward into the storm and stress of the work-a-day world, to him it all appears in its true nothingness; he sees it for what it really is, and is not deceived.

He knows that within himself is the strength of giants and the endurance of the ages. He knows that were he to exert himself he could overcome the most terrible obstacle and put to rout the forces of every opposing influence. He does not merely think these things, he knows them, and he glories in the knowledge of his power.

But he knows more than these. No tinseled, fragile bauble of fame can tempt him to exert that magnificent, heaven-born power of his. No silly, momentary gain of worldly trifles can entice him into loosing upon the foolish hurry and confusion of the human market places that tremendous force which he alone could exert and which, once exerted, would sweep before it the petty vanities and silly, selfish accumulations of what weaklings call their wealth.

Such power as he commands must be reserved—yes, and by all that is great it shall be reserved!—until there comes a time and a demand worthy of its greatness. Meanwhile there is nothing about which to grow excited or even mildly interested. The long-tensed muscles of the body draw and pull and stretch and contract as they gradually seek out the positions of the most perfect repose. The fabric of the mind stirs with hardly perceptible motion, as thoughts come and go, idly as may be, but full of the glorious consciousness of something that none can name and none can understand, but only feel.

Spring fever a disease? Something to be shunned or cured? Not on your life! It is the goodliest gift of the gods to men, and lucky is he who can entice it into his system with all the pleasurable relaxation it can bring.

Enormous Wheat Crop

The United States is fortunate in having two extraordinarily large wheat crops in succession, coincidental with a larger dependence of foreign countries on America for breadstuffs than ever before.

When last year's crop was harvested and proved to reach the huge total of 891,000,000 bushels, 128,000,000 more than any previous crop, it was expected to stand as a record for many years. But the Agricultural Department's report yesterday indicated a probable harvest this year of 950,000,000 bushels, 59,000,000 more than last year and 264,000,000 more than the average of recent years prior to 1914.

A few years ago wheat raising seemed on the decline in the United States and the statisticians calculated that in a short time the growth of population would create a demand for the entire wheat product of the country, leaving no surplus for export. For three years, 1908, 1909 and 1910, the exports averaged less than 60,000,000 bushels yearly, and in the crop year of 1910-11 this country supplied only 11 per cent of the wheat that entered international trade channels. There has been a remarkable change in the situation. In the crop year now ending exports from the United States will be about 330,000,000 bushels, or about 60 per cent of all the wheat moving from one country to another, and it looks as if there might be a still greater amount available from the crop of 1915.

All of which shows how nature and trade conditions can upset the calculations of the statisticians.—Kansas City Star.

THREE DAYS' CELEBRATION AT LONG BEACH

This year Long Beach will celebrate the third, fourth and fifth of July in a most interesting manner to entertain the large crowds expected for these days. Events of unusual interest have been planned for each day, so that visitors will find each and every day brimfull of pleasure.

On Saturday, July 3rd, will occur the unveiling of the only Lincoln monument in California. United States and State officials will be present and appropriate speeches will be made by men of note. Patriotic songs will be heard from a chorus of 500 voices. A fleet of U. S. warships and torpedo boats will be in attendance, the President's salute of twenty-one guns will be fired at the unveiling of the monument.

On Saturday a most unusual 4th of July celebration will take place. To demonstrate their protest against war, thousands of mothers and children will parade through the streets carrying flags and banners inscribed with such sentiments as "We will fight with our brains, not guns!" "If the pen is mightier than the sword, why use the sword?" etc. The parade will be followed by a patriotic program at the Auditorium, free.

Monday, July 5th, will be one round of pleasure for all who visit the Queen of Beaches. Splendid surf and plunge bathing, bowling, fishing, rides of all kinds, dancing, exhibition drills. During the day there will be a Portola display of daylight fireworks, and at night one of the most spectacular sights that has ever been staged will take place. To epict the "horrors of modern warfare," a large three-deck, three-mast, full-rigged vessel has been purchased at enormous expense. Loaded with inflammable material and large quantities of powder, she will approach the Long Beach Pleasure Pier, where she will be attacked and torpedoed by a submarine, setting her on fire. Many explosions will occur when the fire reaches the rigging, where numerous bombs will be placed. Three shore batteries will continue the attack, until a final shot from the submarine into the powder magazine will sink her. Here you will see all the thrilling sights that are now of daily occurrence in Europe—only here you will watch them with perfect safety.

Possession's Price

In this play called Life, ah, which were wiser—to seek to gain by strife the object of delight, and, possessing, be its slave, possession's price, or let unselfish thought abridge the gap, to gain the joy that freedom gives and free remain?—Albert E. Maas.

WILTON LACKAYE AT THE COLONIAL

Wilton Lackaye, one of the biggest stars in the country, is to make his first appearance in Upland next Tuesday evening in the widely known dramatic success, "The Pit," at the Colonial.

In this, his first scenic production, Mr. Lackaye plays the role of Curtis Jadwin, the money-mad American who never has taken time enough from the business of making money to find out that there was any such thing as sentiment.

The part is one of the strongest ever written into an American play, and gives Lackaye a fine opportunity to display the ability that has made him what he is.

Some of the mob scenes in "The Pit" are among the biggest and most exciting ever filmed.

"Cabiria," the wonderful 12-part spectacular production, is to be the Tuesday feature at the Colonial Tuesday, July 6th.

Lo, the Lark Appears!

Sleek and modest in his plumage
Is this little songster wild,
And his piping song but makes us
To our losses reconciled.

Though the song is of a sameness
Yet it's never heard in vain;
Old it is, but ever welcome,
Like the sun that follows rain.

Let this little springtime prophet
Burst his throat with songs of joy;
Every year the notes seem sweeter,
E'en their sameness does not cloy.

Larks are trilling over meadows,
Woods and dales and fields around,
While verdure chaste and flowers
Nod and whisper at the sound.

This harbinger of love and spring
Makes sweet a part of every year,
And youths and maidens fondly seek
Love's secrets as the larks appear.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company All Foreign Rights Reserved

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man.

After many fruitless attempts to put Elaine and Craig Kennedy out of the way the Clutching Hand is at last found to be none other than Perry Bennett, Elaine's lawyer and the man she is engaged to marry. Bennett flees to the den of one of his Chinese criminals. The Chinaman forces from Bennett the secret of the whereabouts of $7,000,000. Then he gives the lawyer a potion which will suspend animation for months. Kennedy reaches Bennett's side just after he has lost consciousness.

TWENTIETH EPISODE

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

Wu Fang sat at a table in his apartment, hidden behind the squalid and balconied exterior of a Chinatown tenement. Before him were a glass dish and a bottle, which contained several sticks of phosphorus immersed in water, and a small capillary glass tube.

For a moment, however, he had laid aside the strange paraphernalia and was writing a note. As he finished he tapped a bell and silently a Chinese servant appeared in answer.

"Take this letter to that white woman, Inez," directed Wu, adding, "Give it to her yourself—and if she is there return with her."

The servant bowed and Wu returned to work on the curious machine he was devising.

He had completed his labors when his trusted lieutenant, Long Sin, entered.

"For what did the master summon me?" asked Long Sin, deferentially.

"Come here," beckoned Wu. "Behold this."

With a pair of tweezers he seized a small stick of the phosphorus under water and slowly brought it to the surface. Almost instantly the dangerous element burst into flame, giving off a dense white smoke.

"Here I have a capillary tube, as the white devils call it in their science," went on Wu, pointing out the glass tube. "By carefully bending it and arranging the outlet of the water I can set a fire anywhere at any time I choose."

Even while he was showing the devilish invention to Long Sin, his servant had sought the elaborately furnished apartment of the white woman to whom the note had been addressed.

She was an attractive young woman, known as Innocent Inez. Except for a certain coarseness, she strongly resembled Elaine, both in features and figure.

Inez turned languidly as her colored maid ushered in the servant of Wu, took the note and read it with interest.

"Wait," she said with a sudden accession of energy, nodding at the same time to her negro maid to bring her hat and coat. "I will go with you."

"Ah—this is the oung woman," introduced Wu to Long Sin.

Carefully planning each detail down to the smallest possibility of error, Wu Fang and Long Sin completed their arrangements and, finally, with Inez left the apartment. On the street an automobile was waiting at the curb, while not far away two toughs from the neighborhood stood.

As the Chinamen and the woman came out Wu beckoned to the waiting roughnecks. "Come—get in—lively," he ordered.

They climbed into the car and the five criminals whirled rapidly uptown.

Kennedy had often been amused at my never having a match when I needed it, and it had occurred to him to devise a very novel cigarette lighter for my benefit.

It was simple enough, consisting of a small battery connected by small wires to one of a pair of cuff links. One link had in its face a very fine wire, only a fraction of an inch long. To the link Craig had soldered the wires from the battery and arranged them so that they ran up under his coat sleeve through the armhole of the vest to the battery, which he carried in his vest pocket.

He had just completed his work when he heard me coming and hastily drew on his coat.

"Well, what's new?" I greeted.

"Nothing in particular," he replied. "Have a cigarette?"

He handed his cigarette case to me and I took one. Then, unsuspecting, I began to search my pockets for a match, but, as usual, could not find one.

At last, half mockingly, he lighted his cigarette apparently on his cuff link.

"What new-fangled sort of thing is that?" I asked in surprise.

"I thought it might amuse you," he smiled, explaining the arrangement as he opened his vest and showed me how he made the electric connection by a mere pressure of his arm. "I'll give it to you some day."

Naturally I was delighted by the novelty of the thing.

Elaine was reading to Aunt Josephine in the library when, not long after Wu's car slid out of the maze of streets of Chinatown, it stopped a few blocks below the Dodge house. With Long Sin, Wu got out and assisted Inez out.

"Walk up the avenue—you know the house," he directed Inez; then, turning to the roughs inside the car, added: "You will calculate to catch up with her directly in front of the house. After that, meet us just below, around the corner."

Wu and Long Sin quickly walked downtown again, while Inez went on up, followed shortly by the car with the two toughs.

Elaine had just finished the book and laid it down.

Suddenly, almost underneath the library window, she heard agonizing screams of "Help! Help!"

An instant later Jennings came rushing into the library from the hall and threw open the window to look out.

Inez had been just about to pass the house when Wu's car drove up and stopped. Without warning, apparently, two toughs had leaped out and seized her.

"Oh, they're trying to kidnap that poor girl!" cried Elaine, remembering her own terrible experience.

Jennings was out of the door in a moment followed by Elaine and Aunt Josephine in a great state of excitement.

But the moment the toughs saw aid coming from the Dodge house they ran to the car as if thoroughly frightened and drove away as swiftly as they had come, while Inez sank down on the sidewalk, seemingly overcome.

"Take her into the house, Jennings," directed Elaine, soothing Inez, who by this time had faked a perfectly convincing case of hysterics.

In the library, where she was placed in an easy chair, Elaine, her aunt, Marie and Jennings gathered about, while between smelling salts and cold water Inez, weeping and trembling like the good actress that she was, managed to tell a pitiful story of how she was just a poor lady's maid who had lost her position and now was pursued on the streets by white slavers.

"Oh, please, miss, may I stay here a while till I feel better?" she pleaded. "Oh—if I could only work for you and the kind lady who is like a mother," she sobbed, turning from Elaine to her aunt.

It was a touching story, and it reached the hearts it was intended for.

"Don't worry; I'll see you through this affair," nodded Elaine, wiping away the girl's tears and smiling bravely at her. "Take her upstairs, Marie. She can find plenty to do in this big house, I'm sure."

Even while Inez was looking her thanks from her swollen teary eyes, already the car containing the toughs had drawn up around the lower corner, and Wu and Long Sin had taken the places of the thugs.

"Everything worked fine, master," reported the gunmen.

* * * * * *

I had gone over to the apartment after Kennedy had perpetrated his little joke with the new cigarette lighter, and there I found several letters waiting for him.

Having nothing better to do, I decided to go back to the laboratory, where I left him at work, and take along the mail in case there might be something important in it for him.

He opened one or two letters, then came to one which I had laid on his desk in a plain envelope, addressed evidently in a disguised hand. He tore it open and read it with a scowl.

"Well, Walter, what do you think of that?" he remarked, tossing it over to me.

I read it in astonishment:

Another attempt is about to be made to kidnap Elaine Dodge.

A FRIEND.

I looked at him and shook my head blankly, while Craig took up the telephone and called the Dodge house.

"No one answers," he muttered, working the telephone hook up and down, "but I'm sure someone took off that receiver over there and listened in. Operator—will you ring that number again?"

Unable to get any reply over the Dodge telephone, Kennedy thought a moment, then scrawled in his familiar hand on the bottom of the anonymous note, sealed it in another envelope directed to Elaine, and called a messenger.

Inez, meanwhile, had transformed herself into a full-fledged maid, looking very pretty in her neat cap and apron, and making herself useful in a hundred ways about the Dodge house.

Without being obtrusive she was seldom out of hearing of the telephone, however, and it happened that at just the moment when Craig called up she was there to intercept the call, taking off the receiver, but not answering. Instead, she hung up and wedged the telephone bell with a piece of paper so that it would not ring at all.

She was about to move away from the desk when Elaine entered the library.

"Didn't I hear the telephone bell ring?" she asked.

Inez was quick. "Yes," she replied, "my former mistress telephoned that she is sending my trunk today."

"Oh, very well," smiled Elaine, passing on through the library with an encouraging nod to the girl.

Inez had killed two birds with one stone. Not only had she disarmed suspicion about the interrupted call, but she had laid the foundation for the delivery of a trunk which at that moment she knew Wu and Long Sin were preparing and packing.

It was a large trunk, and in it the two wily Chinamen were packing a chair, as well as the phosphorus machine.

"Once Mistress Inez induces Elaine to sit in this chair," observed Wu, tapping it significantly as he closed the trunk, "half our work is completed."

Uptown Inez, always on guard, was watching for the safe arrival of the trunk, when she saw a messenger boy coming up the steps of the house.

Perhaps, it flashed over her, it was some message from Kennedy. She must get it, whatever it was.

Without hesitating a moment she slipped back into the library while the boy was still at the door and wrote a note of her own at the desk. She had thought out beforehand just what plan she was to adopt and the note read:

Dear Miss Dodge:

The ladies of the First Baptist church will send a collector for our rummage sale this afternoon. We thank you for whatever you can give him.

Yours truly,

Miss Ella Burns,

Secretary, Woman's Guild.

Inez read over the note she had written herself as the messenger boy continued ringing the bell impatiently. Then she hurried into the hall to open the door.

The boy came in and Inez took the note he had brought, signing Elaine's name for it in his book. She had acted not a moment too soon, for Elaine had heard the bell and was now coming downstairs herself.

"Was it anything for me, Inez?" she asked.

Inez deftly palmed the letter and substituted the note she had written.

Elaine's Double Receives the Note From Wu.

"Yes, ma'am," she replied, handing Elaine the faked note.

Elaine read it. "I didn't know about the rummage sale before," she commented, as she went into the library, "but I guess I'll have to give them something."

She sat down for a moment to look over a new fashion magazine. Outside in the hallway Inez was reading the note which the messenger boy had brought, with the warning postscript written by Kennedy underneath. She knew, as she destroyed it, that it was only a part of Wu's subtle plan to alarm Kennedy and start him on a false scent.

It was not many minutes later that the bell rang again, and this time Jennings answered the door, disclosing the expressman with a heavy trunk.

"Oh, I guess that's my trunk," Inez exclaimed. "May I have it taken up to the attic, out of the way?"

The men carried the big trunk upstairs into the attic, a large room full of trunks, some old furniture and a great many old dresses hanging up. As they set it down she signed the receipt for it, and the expressmen clumped downstairs.

For a moment she leaned over the railing and looked after them to make sure that she was alone, then hastily locked the door and ran back to the trunk to unlock it.

First she took out the chair which Wu had devised and placed it near the clothes hanging up. Next she removed the phosphorus mechanism and placed it in the shadow back of the chair, piling up some excelsior and other dry stuff over and around it.

Inez had scarcely completed her arrangements when it occurred to Elaine, down in the library, that she had done nothing yet about the letter from the Women's Guild.

"I wonder what there is upstairs that I can give them," she thought, as she re-read the letter. "I think I'll see."

She started up, just as Inez was leaving.

The adventuress in the attic heard Elaine coming and quickly slipped behind a door, letting Elaine pass her, without being seen.

In the attic Elaine started to take down and examine several dresses for the rummage sale, laying them aside one by one.

An attic is always a place that calls up memories of the past, and Elaine soon began to think of things that were suggested by one after another of the discarded dresses. Besides, some of them were scarcely worth sending, anyway. She sat down, absently, in the chair to think it over.

Suddenly a secret spring released a set of bands that automatically and swiftly clamped over Elaine's arms and about her body and neck, holding her in a grip of steel. At the same time a vapor bulb in the back of the chair shot out its smothering fumes, rendering her unconscious.

Elaine was caught in a trap.

Inez in silent exultation opened the attic door just a trifle. Then her slender hand reached in and took the key from the inside, shut the door and locked it from the outside.

Stealthily Inez crept downstairs from the attic and into Elaine's room. There, taking care that neither Marie nor Aunt Josephine was about, she opened the closet and took out the dress, coat and hat which Elaine had worn when she was kidnaped by Wu and stuffed them into a suitcase. Inez closed the suitcase quickly, threw on her own hat and coat and left the house unobserved.

Half an hour later she entered the opium joint on Mott street.

There were both Wu and Long Sin carefully examining a blonde wig made up as closely as possible to resemble the golden masses that were the crown of Elaine's beauty. Four or five other Chinamen sat and stood about at a respectful distance.

"Have you the clothes?" asked Wu, greeting Inez.

"Yes," she returned. "All has been done exactly as you ordered."

"Good," complimented Wu. "Then you may prepare yourself immediately."

* * * * * * *

In the meantime a second trap was being prepared for Kennedy. The note of warning regarding Elaine was merely a first step in the entanglement.

We were in the laboratory and Craig was at work testing some chemicals, about to pour a liquid from a beaker into a test tube. He paused, poising both in his hands, listening. Outside we could hear what sounded like a scratching at the door.

"Be quiet just a minute, Walter," whispered Craig, moving on tiptoe toward the door.

The fact was that a young Chinaman had crept up cautiously and was crouching there in a position like that of a runner about to start in a race. Actually he was merely waiting for Kennedy to open the door, but it looked as though he were listening.

As Craig threw open the door he started off like a racer, apparently dropping a piece of paper in his hurry.

I darted out after him, while Craig stooped and picked up the paper, then stood gazing after us.

Down the hall the young Chinaman dashed until he came to the back entrance to the laboratory. There he turned and crouched again in the darkness.

A moment later I came after him. As I passed the door he seemed to rise up unexpectedly and I stumbled headlong over him, almost stunned as I hit the floor. He rose again and criss-crossed around the corner of the building before I could pick myself up. It was of no use now to chase him further, and I limped back into the laboratory.

"He got away in spite of me," I managed to blurt out as I rejoined Kennedy in the hall. "What's that?"

"A note of some kind that he dropped," replied Craig, passing over to me the paper he had picked up.

I read in English:

"See what he is doing and report to me in the basement below 116 Mott street."

Beneath the few words, evidently orders, was that mystic sign of the serpent—the mark of the arch-criminal, Wu Fang.

"It's a clue, Craig!" I exclaimed.

For a moment Craig said nothing, as he turned to go back into the laboratory. For some time he continued to study the note, as though revolving something in his mind.

"Whatever it is," he remarked at length, "I'm going to look into it, anyhow. While I'm gone, Walter, I wish you'd just go around and see if Elaine is all right."

* * * * * * *

At last Kennedy sauntered in casually to the hop joint on Mott street, his collar still up and his hat still over his eyes.

He lounged across the floor among the smokers and picked out a bunk, while Hop Sing, the proprietor, brought him a pipe. Kennedy pretended to light it, but in reality did not.

In the back room, by this time, Inez had completed her disguise by placing on her head the wig and had given the little finishing touches to her make-up. Wu was giving final instructions to Long Sin and the rest, and the four Chinamen ranged themselves in groups of two on either side of the door.

Finally Wu paused and whispered something to Inez. Then both he and Long Sin seized two glass globes that stood on the table. They raised them high over their heads and smashed them on the floor, at the same time stamping their feet terrifically. Inez screamed as if a murder were being committed.

Outside in the den Kennedy heard the scream and the crashing of glass, muffled by the door. He straightened up in his bunk, now all attention.

Was it some white woman calling for help in this sinkhole of iniquity?

The door flew open. Sure enough, a woman appeared, still screaming.

It was only for an instant and she did not even get across the threshold. With a low guttural exclamation, Long Sin pulled her back into the room and slammed the door she had opened.

It was all done so quickly that Kennedy could catch only the most fleeting glimpse of her clothes and face. But that glimpse was enough.

It was—apparently—Elaine!

Craig sprang up instantly, drawing his revolver, and threw himself against the door, recollecting the warning message that had come through the mail.

The door yielded and he rushed through. In an instant the four Chinamen crouching on either side leaped on him.

The struggle was terrific. He downed two and seemed in a fair way to win against even such odds, when the disguised Inez turned, with a mocking laugh, pulling off both the hat and wig.

Kennedy's amazement gave the Chinamen a chance. Before he realized it, in his complete surprise, he was forced back on the post and held there just long enough for Long Sin to wind a rope around him, binding his arms, legs and body to the post.

Then Wu Fang walked over before him and faced him.

"Come over here, my dear," he called to Inez. "Let me introduce Prof. Craig Kennedy to you—Innocent Inez."

"By the way," he went on to Inez, "how did you leave the real Elaine?"

Inez looked at her watch. "She is locked in her attic," she replied with evident enjoyment. "The house will start to burn by spontaneous combustion in exactly twenty minutes."

* * * * * * *

Upstairs in the attic of the Dodge house Elaine, in the queer chair, was just recovering a bit from the effects of the vapor.

Still as the minutes lengthened she began to breathe more regularly as the stupefying effects of the vapor wore off, and was just beginning to move her head in the first unconscious endeavors to grasp at consciousness.

It must have been just at this point that, following Kennedy's instructions, I arrived at Elaine's house.

As Jennings led me into the library I was met by Aunt Josephine.

"Craig has gone off on a clue," I explained, "and has asked me to drop in to see how things are. Is Elaine all right?"

"Why, I haven't seen her for an hour or more," answered Aunt Josephine. "I think she must have gone out. Won't you sit down?"

There was nothing else to do. On the chance that she might come back, I sat down, considerably worried now, about the note and her absence.

Upstairs, if we had only known it, Elaine had now regained consciousness.

Worse than that, the time was up for the water to be drained off the phosphorus.

As the last drop was siphoned off the vessel by the capillary tube, the deadly element seemed to burst into flames and white fumes. Instantly the dry tinderlike excelsior and other stuff caught fire.

* * * * * * *

Helpless, tied to the post, Kennedy had not ceased struggling to free himself, though without avail.

Suddenly an idea occurred to him. He gazed down at his hands and wrists. Suppose they were not free? Was there no way to use them?

Slowly he turned his arm around until the outside of his wrist pressed on a rope. Then he drew his upper arm tight to his side, still with his wrist pressing on the rope.

His heart fairly leaped. It worked! The cuff link which he had devised as a cigarette lighter as a joke on me was burning the rope.

Then he pulled at the weakened ropes as he had before in his futile struggles.

They broke.

Just on the other side of the door he could hear the low buzz of the argument as Long Sin urged Wu to allow him to kill Kennedy.

"Very well, then," Wu at last agreed, looking at his watch and nodding to Long Sin and the others who sprang forward.

Free from his bonds, Kennedy had been standing a second wondering how to escape from the room. Just then he heard footsteps outside. Quickly he replaced the ropes about him so that they looked as if he were still bound by them.

"Are You All Right?" Gasped Craig.

The door opened, and Wu and Long Sin entered, each with a knife, while behind them were three other Chinamen.

Wu advanced. Slowly he raised his knife to strike.

"The white girl is slowly being burned to death," he hissed, brandishing the knife. "The allotted time is spent."

As he poised the knife in fiendish glee, Kennedy leaped forward from his loosened bonds and knocked him to the floor.

So unexpected was the assault that before he knew it Long Sin was also sprawling beside his master.

Craig seized the only weapon at hand, a taboret, and brought it down with smashing blows on the heads of the other astounded and unnerved Chinamen.

Once on the street, even in Chinatown, he was safe.

But it was not his own safety now that had nerved up his strength to escape from the unescapable.

Was he in time?

* * * * * * *

"I think I had better go back to the laboratory and wait for Craig," I said at last to Aunt Josephine after waiting for a time that seemed like hours. "Please let me know the moment you hear from Elaine."

I was about to turn from the foot of the steps to the Dodge house, when a taxicab came dashing up almost on the sidewalk urged on by some maniac inside. Imagine my surprise to see Craig, wild and dishevelled, leap out.

"Is Elaine here—safe?" he demanded.

"She isn't home," I managed to reply.

"Are you sure?" he repeated. "Did you search?"

He uttered a sudden cry, pointing up at the roof.

"Look!" he gasped horrified.

I stared in blank amazement. Smoke was pouring out of the attic windows in dense black columns, lighted by an angry flame.

"Fire!" shouted Kennedy, dashing instantly into the house.

As we mounted the stairs now we could hear muffled screams from the attic.

Smoke was pouring out from under the door and even through the keyhole. Jennings had heard Kennedy's call and was now dashing up after us with a fire extinguisher. Back of him came Aunt Josephine and Elaine's maid, Marie, screaming for help.

Like a human battering ram we went through that door. A sheet of flame shot out at us with the draft. But Kennedy stopped for nothing.

There was Elaine in a chair which the devilish mind of Wu Fang had devised to imprison her while the flames licked out her beauty and life. Instantly Craig understood and acted.

"Carry her out!" he cried, gasping for breath himself.

Together we seized the chair and its precious burden. Not a moment too soon we set the chair down outside in the hall, ourselves scorched and blistered.

It was as though Craig had accepted the challenge of the fiery monster. Seizing the extinguisher from Jennings he attacked the flames.

By this time Jennings, Marie and Aunt Josephine had succeeded in unfastening Elaine, as our onslaught with chemicals and force brought the fire demon under control.

"Are you—all right?" cried Craig, stooping over Elaine as she leaned back half-fainting in his arms.

"Are you?" she murmured heroically, forgetting her own hurts in her fear for him.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constiutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. WILL CALIFORNIA BE WET OR DRY?

alcoholic liquor shall be sold or given away at any pharmacy except as authorized by law for medicinal, sacramental, scientific or mechanical purposes; and no such liquor shall be given away or sold by manufacturers in any quantity less than two gallons, and said manufacturers shall not deliver any such liquor except as follows:

(a) To common carriers for shipment to the purchaser;

(b) To pharmacists at their pharmacies;

(c) To the permanent residence of purchasers.

Sec. 5. After January 1, 1918, no alcoholic liquor shall be transported into or within the State of California in any quantity less than two gallons.

Sec. 6. The term alcoholic liquor as used in this article shall include spirituous, vinous and malt liquors and any other liquor or mixture of liquors which contains more than one-half of 1 per cent by volume of alcohol, and which is not so mixed with other drugs as to prevent its use as a beverage.

Sec. 7. Any person, whether acting as agent, employe or otherwise, violating any provision of this article shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1000) or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; but any person found guilty of violating any provision of this article by conviction for an offense committed after a previous conviction under this article, shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars ($200) nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars ($2500) and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than one year. All alcoholic liquors kept in violation of this article shall, upon conviction of the owner or manager of the place where such liquors are kept, be destroyed. Additional penalties may be imposed by law.

Sec. 8. The payment of the special tax required of liquor dealers by the United States by any person or persons, other than registered pharmacists and manufacturers of alcoholic liquors, shall be prima facie evidence that such person or persons are keeping and selling alcoholic liquors in violation of this article, and in any prosecution under this article a certificate from the collector of internal revenue, or from any of his deputies or agents, showing that such tax has been paid by defendant, either alone or in association with others, shall be sufficient evidence of the payment of such tax.

Sec. 9. This article shall not be so construed as to repeal any provision of any law or ordinance now in force prohibiting the manufacture, sale, giving away or delivery of any alcoholic liquor; nor shall it be construed as limiting the power of the State or of any political subdivision of the State to immediately prohibit the manufacture, importation, sale or service of such liquor.

Amendment No. 2

Section 1. After January 1, 1920, no alcoholic liquor shall be manufactured, kept or sold in, or be introduced into, the State of California except as authorized by law for medicinal, sacramental, scientific and mechanical purposes.

Sec. 2. The terms alcoholic liquor, as used in this article, shall include spirituous, vinous and malt liquors and any other liquor or mixture of liquors which contains more than one-half of 1 per cent by volume of alcohol, and which is not so mixed with other drugs as to prevent its use as a beverage.

Sec. 3. Any person, whether acting as agent, employe or otherwise, violating any provision of this article shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1000) or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; but any person found guilty of violating any provision of this aricle by conviction for an offense committed after a previous conviction under this article, shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars ($200) nor more than twenty-five hundred dollars ($2500) and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than one year. All alcoholic liquors found in the possession of any person convicted of violating this article shall be destroyed. Additional penalties may be imposed by law.

Sec. 4. The payment of the special tax required of liquor dealers by the United States by any person or persons, other than registered pharmacists and manufacturers of alcoholic liquors, shall be prima facie evidence that such person or persons are keeping and selling alcoholic liquors in violation of this article, and in any prosecution under this article a certificate from the collector of internal revenue or from any of his deputies or agents, showing that such tax has been paid by the defendant, either alone or in association with others, shall be sufficient evidence of the payment of such tax.

Sec. 5. Nothing in this article shall be so construed as to repeal any provision of any law or ordinance now in force or enacted prior to January 1, 1920, which prohibits the manufacture, sale, giving away or delivery of any alcoholic liquor; nor shall this article be construed as in conflict with any other amendment of the Constitution of the State of California adopted at the same time as this is adopted, and dealing with alcoholic liquors; it being the intention that this amendment shall supercede such other amendments on January 1, 1920, and not until then.

Laborers for Railroads Wanted

Employment agencies in Chicago are looking for 2000 unskilled laborers to work for the Burlington railroad, 4000 for the Union Pacific and 4000 more for the Northwestern and Missouri Pacific systems.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC WORK

NOTICE is hereby given that on the 2nd day of June, 1915, the Board of Trustees of the City of Upland, passed and adopted Resolution of Intention No. 229, declaring that the public interest and convenience required and demanded, and that it is their intention to order the following public work to be done and improvement to be made in said City, to-wit:

That all of that certain alley in the City of Upland, lying and being between Lots Seven (7) and Eight (8), and Lots Fifteen (15) and Sixteen (16) of Block Twenty-three (23) of the MAGNOLIA TRACT, according to the plat thereof of record in the office of the County Recorder of San Bernardino County, be closed and abandoned, said portion of said alley so intended to be abandoned being sixteen (16) feet in width and extending from the north line of D Street in said City to a point one hundred (100) feet north thereof.

That the exterior boundaries of the district hereby established and the exterior boundaries of the district of land hereby declared to be affected and benefited by the closing of said alley and to be assessed to pay the damages, costs and expenses thereof, are described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at the southeast corner of Block Twenty-three (23) of the MAGNOLIA TRACT in said City, according to the plat of said tract of record in the office of the County Recorder of San Bernardino County; thence north to the northeast corner of said block; thence west to the northwest corner of said block; thence south to the southwest corner of said block; thence east to the point of beginning.

All of the herein proposed work shall be done in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "An Act to provide for laying out, opening, extending, widening, straightening or closing up, in whole or in part, any street, square, lane, alley, court or place within municipalities, and to condemn and acquire any and all land and property necessary or convenient for that purpose," approved March 6th, 1889, and the several acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto.

Reference is hereby made to said Resolution of Intention for further particulars in reference to the aforesaid contemplated work and improvement.

FRATERNAL AID'S SOCIAL EVENING

One of the cleverest and most unique of the week's affairs was the Trade social Friday evening, June 11th, the eighth of a projected series of informal evenings given by the Blue and Gold contestants. The special feature of the evening was the representation of some occupation or branch of trade in the City of Upland—or as their fancy dictated. A jolly good time was the motive, and they always have it. Mrs. Claude M. Paxson cleverly represented a baby, with bib and nursing bottle; Mrs. Clara B. Duncan, dressmaker; Mrs. Hoffer, housewife; Mrs. Ella Chaffee, "Upland Tavern"; Mrs. Clara Hunter, lemon grader; Mrs. Hess and Mrs. Ide Miller, nurses from the San Antonio Hospital; Mrs. Bell, housewife; Mrs. Redman, parlor maid; Mrs. Aaron Brest, Atwood's Dry Goods Store; Mrs. O'Connel, housewife; Mr. E. Hess and G. A. Brown, sailors of the U. S. Marine Corps; Mr. Hunter, janitor of Upland Grammar School; Mr. Hess and Mr. Hoffer, carpenters; Mr. Frank Miller and John Marshall, stone masons.

Mr. E. P. Chaffee was a picture in his many colored labels from the Orange Exchange. Miss Esther Hess emulated Ramona as an Indian maiden; Mrs. Sara Vetter was the sensation of the evening, dressed as a typical spinster of the antebellum days. She played the role admirably, using her snuff box with the greatest fervor and creating much amusement in her ancient gown and Paisley shawl, corkscrew curls and in many other ways added to the levity of the evening.

Mrs. Francis Chaffee represented the Caramel Shop of Chaffee and Moler, dressed in a Grecian gown embellished with cords and tassels of candy and a crown of marshmallows.

A short musical program and games followed:

Piano Solo, Miss Maud Colburn.

Campfire Song, "Burn, Fire, Burn," Miss Ester Hess.

At the business session five members were initiated and given the right hand of fellowship.

The delightful evening was completed with cooling refreshments.

OVERLAND MOTORCAR SALES GAIN

The J. W. Leavitt Company has established a record for the Pacific Coast in motor car sales which is amazing, according to reports received by Manager Starr of the local branch. The coast Overland distributors delivered more than 1000 of the Overland cars for 1916 in the first three weeks after deliveries were announced.

This is a mark which has not even been approached by any car selling for more than $600 on the coast. It has taxed the capacities of the factory to the utmost to meet the delivery demands, for not only is the Pacific Coast selling these cars rapidly, but in the East the demands for delivery are heavy. One hundred and twenty-five carloads of Overlands were included in the first shipment of Overland cars to the New York agent, while the factory is now 17,000 behind in orders for immediate delivery, with a large proportion of these back orders coming from the Pacific Coast.

Of the J. W. Leavitt Company's chain of branches on the Pacific coast, the Los Angeles house has done probably the most business, and Manager Starr, under whose able direction an immense clientele has been developed, is finding difficulty in meeting the demands for immediate delivery. Model 83, as the new Overland is known, is a large touring car with a roomy five-passenger body. The motor is the same 35-horsepower plant that was used in the large Overland last year. Its cylinders have a bore of 4⅛ and a stroke of 4½ inches.

"Oh, dear! I wish I could live at grandma's all the time," said small Francesca, after being chastised for misbehavior. "Why so?" asked her mother. "'Cause," explained the little miss, "I don't have to mind a word she says."

day night. Mrs. Garbut, as leader of the meeting, said:

"It is the thought of the women all over the world that this must be the last war. The women feel that they must be the great pacificators of the world—that upon them, the mothers of the race, rests a great duty and responsibility, and that they should have a voice in the future decisions as to whether there shall be war or not.

"It behooves the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to be active along those lines. We want a patriotism that is broader than that of just our own country—an international patriotism, all children of one common father, and that all difficulties that may arise among nations shall be settled, not by war, but by peaceful means."

No Job Too Large
None Too Small for

The News Print Shop

IT has taken several years and a large investment in machinery for The News management to be able to make the statement that there is not a job of printing too large nor too small to be successfully produced in THE NEWS PRINT SHOP.

DURING the past year a Two-Revolution Optimus Press, also a new 12x18 Chandler & Price Job Printing Press, have been installed, in order that buyers of printing might find in this city a plant which can produce not only the regular run of commercial printing, but also the best in high-class half-tone and color work.

WE are here to prove to you the above statements, and to stand behind every piece of Job Printing produced in this shop. If it isn't right, or you are not perfectly satisfied with it, let us know and it will be made satisfactory.

George Forester and Lester Bennett motored to Los Angeles Sunday.

The ball game last Sunday ended in a victory for Ontario Merchants. The score was 19-3. A game between the Cucamonga and Ontario Merchants will be played at Ontario next Sunday.

Joe Whitlock, Cucamonga's new barber, has moved his family here from Ontario. Mr. Whitlock and family will live in the L. F. Cob house.

S. P. Kincaid and family and J. T. Motsinger motored to San Diego to take in the Exposition.

Miss Mildred Rowe has accepted a position with the Pacific Electric Company at Ontario.

Leo Lucas has completed his High School course at Santa Clara. Mr. and Mrs. Lucas attended the exercises, returning home the early part of the week, Leo accompanying them.

USE OF ACORNS

Little attention has been given in this coutnry to the utilization of acorns. It is well known that they are used as food for cattle, horses, swine, turkeys, and those of several species of white oaks also form the food of man.

The acorns of white oaks are mostly large and the trees in general produce fruit abundantly. The Indians in California always gathered the acorns of the California live oak and years of great scarcity often caused much misery. Even the early white settlers of California relied on the crop of acorns as part of their food supply.

The acorns were gathered by the squaws, who preserved them by putting them in wicker baskets, which were generally stored in hollow oak trees or in caches. They were prepared for eating by grinding and boiling them in water into a thick paste, which was baked into bread. The oven consisted of a hole in the ground, about eighteen inches each way. Red hot stones were placed in the bottom of it and a little dry sand or loam placed over them. Next a layer of dry leaves was spread over this and the dough or paste poured into the hole until it was two or three inches deep. A layer of leaves, more sand, red hot stones, and finally earth was placed on top. At the end of five or six hours the stones had cooled and the bread, which was in an irregular mass nearly black in color, was taken out.

In parts of the South acorns of the cow oak have been used when roasted as a coffee substitute, and there are a good many other uses to which they might be put. Alcohol can be made from them, as from all starchy substance. Starch is at present made principally from rice, corn and potatoes, but if the starch from acorns is sufficiently refined it may be employed as an article of diet as well as for laundry purposes. Acorns contain more sugar and gum, and it is probable that these substances can be profitably used for domestic purposes.
